The screenshot shows the 'New Submission' page on SSRN. A yellow warning dialog box is centered on the screen. The dialog box contains the following text: IMPORTANT: By clicking the "Continue" button, you agree to SSRN's Terms of Use. You do not transfer copyright for any papers (or other documents) you post on SSRN. When you upload a paper, you give SSRN the non-exclusive right to post and distribute your paper as described in the "SSRN Products and Services" section of the FAQ. You retain the right to remove your paper from SSRN at any time. When you provide material to SSRN and accept our Terms of Use, you confirm to us that your submission does not violate other parties' copyright or other proprietary rights. You may post your paper to SSRN only if you are the copyright owner, have the copyright owner's permission, are permitted to do so under your publishing agreement or the publisher's copyright policies (see www.howcanishareit.com for more information) or your institution's license agreement or under a Creative Commons license. Generally, an author can convey this right, unless he or she has granted exclusive electronic rights to a publisher. If you have questions about copyright, please contact the publisher, your librarian or SSRN, and see our FAQ for more information. At the bottom of the dialog box, there are two buttons: 'Continue' (highlighted with a red box) and 'Cancel'.
